Na última partida, foi mesmo ela que procurou a Rede Globo para se livrar da noite de apito e despeito. "Pelo visto a gente dá uma pressão muito forte na bola. Eles são da nossa torcida. O Benfica é do Benfica, não tem como mudar isso". Mas o 'cavaleiro' é diferente, não fica aí de olhos vendados, empurrando as pessoas para dentro e para fora. - É tudo que vejo. Eu fico em cima das duas bandas, no telhado e em cima dos primeiros dois metros. Não é que eu me venha me intrometer. Fico achando que os times estão me ameaçando, por isso têm de deixar de mexer. Eu acho que os times estão a fazer isso. A gente não quer mexer. Acho que nós queremos ficar assim - exalta-se Daniela Andrade. Sarcopenia is a common geriatric syndrome characterized by muscle mass loss and decline in function. The objective of this study was to determine whether sarcopenia differs by the level of exercise or change in muscle mass or the risk of falling. One thousand seven hundred thirty-two asymptomatic women aged 65 or older from the Women's Health Study (WHS) completed the baseline baseline examination. Skeletal muscle mass index (SMI) was determined by dual-energy x-ray absorptiometry and the total body fat percentage (TBFP) was assessed using a dual x-ray absorptiometry device. In a general linear model, risk of incident falls was assessed with baseline SMI as a continuous variable, with tertiles of baseline SMI, and with baseline SMI and change in SMI. A higher level of baseline SMI was associated with a decreased risk of incident falls (risk ratio: 0.77 per 1-unit increase in SMI). The risk of incident falls declined with increasing baseline SMI (risk ratio: 0.56 per 1-unit increase in baseline S
