The effects of chronic phenytoin administration on the peripheral and central nervous systems of mice. The effect of chronic phenytoin on growth rate, body weight, hematology, bone marrow, immunological and hepatic functions was studied in mice. Phenytoin impaired humoral immunity and liver dysfunction in the mouse. Phenytoin induced marked morphological changes in the central nervous system, peripheral nervous system and skeletal muscle as indicated by electron microscopy. The drug caused vacuolation of the cytoplasm of neurons and myelin sheath of nerve cells, which could be of pathogenic importance in the development of spongy degeneration of neurons and demyelination in the brain.:101E000001C0B2C011248FE598E09EBF8DBF84B7A1
